Planning a Team Rage Painting Session in Bristol

The teams who want to participate in a fun activity together in Bristol should opt for rage painting Bristol in the studio called Splasherist in Bedminster. They use various ways to splatter the paint on their personal canvas and thus, there are no competitions or ratings. The studio can accommodate up to twenty six people, and the groups with the number of people from ten or more get a discount of five percent. Everything necessary is given to the participants, and after that, everyone will take his or her canvas home.

Welcome to Bristol Team Sessions

Are you looking for a great way for your team to express themselves and share ideas? rage painting Bristol sessions are a fun activity that will give you all a common task to solve together. Your team members will have fun throwing, flicking, and splashing paint onto their canvas, which they can then take home with them. There's room for lots of different teams here at Willway Yard in Bedminster.

Many team-building events seem forced when they're being organized. But here, no particular skills are required, and there is no evaluation of the result. Everything is explained when the participants arrive, so that they feel relaxed and ready to get painting.

Bristol is known for its creative atmosphere and exhibitions, concerts and creative makers. Your team will experience something new.

Why Teams Choose Rage Painting

Team exercises may be based on competition, making some individuals feel like an outsider. Rage painting is unique from others in that every individual works independently without being judged or graded against anyone else.

Shared Energy Without Pressure

Painting in groups is a collective effort, free from the fear of performance. Comparing their paintings, sharing colors, and encouraging one another helps build good will among all members of the team.

A Break From the Office

Away from the routine environment, there is an opportunity for everybody to relax. Most teams find themselves more relaxed and closer to each other after the retreat.

The Bristol Studio for Groups

The location of the Bristol studio is Willway Yard, Bedminster, BS3 4AZ. It is capable of hosting up to twenty six guests, making it perfect for bigger groups and companies. The building is air-conditioned and wheelchair friendly, and there is free private parking available.

The train station is only a ten minute walk away, and people coming from other areas in the city or via the train can easily find their way to the studio.

Choosing the Right Session for Teams

A regular session will come with painting time, protective gear, paints, materials, and canvas to take away. It is quite an easy option for those teams which would like to engage in a simple activity and cost from £35 per person.

Standard Sessions for Large Teams

It is easy to arrange a regular session with a large number of participants as it has a definite structure. All of the participants get the same material and protection equipment that helps make everything equal.

Themed Options and Extras

The themed sessions incorporate additional elements like UV lights or music, thus allowing teams to select their own atmosphere. The extras selected ahead of time will ensure that the team will have everything prepared on arrival.

Who Benefits Most From Group Visits

Any team will be able to benefit from a group session. Such sessions are used by sales teams, marketing companies, and small businesses to recognize hard work and celebrate some achievement. Also, friends and colleagues going for a night out choose such a session to get together.

Teams made up of people who rarely meet each other will definitely appreciate such a session as it makes people talk to those whom they do not usually speak to at their workplaces.

In case the members of the team are young, there should always be a responsible adult present during the session.

How Painting Builds Team Connection

The teams that make use of rage painting will realize that it fosters connection among members, since it provides them with some common experience. It is quite likely that colleagues will discuss how they performed the task, what colors they used, and what was the result on the canvas.

The task is effective not only as a method of connecting, but also as an approach for team building, since all members participate in it equally, and everybody gets the result – the artwork that he/she has painted.

It turns out that for many groups it does not become just some nice experience within the limits of the studio. This experience becomes a reference point for further conversations about the event.

Group Discounts and Booking Numbers

Discounts of five percent apply to bookings by groups of ten or more, and this makes it cheaper to book when there is a larger number of people. This is because the maximum number of people that the studio can accommodate is twenty-six.

Confirming the Headcount

This ensures there are no issues during the event when the booking takes place. In case anything changes in terms of numbers, the best thing to do is reach out to the studio.

Splitting Costs Across a Team

There are many groups that decide on the budget beforehand. Determining the rate per individual and all the additional costs in advance will facilitate fair cost allocation.

Planning a Group Visit Step by Step

Group booking is made easier if one knows how it should be done. Select a date that would suit most of the group, then agree on the number of participants as well as session type.

Next step will involve booking online from the Splasherist site, where you choose Bristol Studio and time slots. You can pay by card, Apple Pay, Google Pay or gift card, and you will be given an option for 20% deposit at the Bristol Studio.

The last step involves informing all the guests about time, address and session type. It is important to ask your guests to arrive five minutes before time.

What Happens on a Team Visit Day

On that day, the team comes to the studio and registers with the team members. They store all their personal effects in the lockers and put on their safety gear.

Arrival and Preparation

There is full protection gear available, which includes coverall clothing in different sizes, a face visor or goggles, non-slip shoe covers, and gloves. There is also a sound system available so that the group can play their own music in the session.

The Painting Session

The host describes how the session will take place, and the timed painting process is self-guided. Co-workers can toss, flick, and spray paint in whatever order they choose, and the room soon becomes full of energy and laughter.

Taking Team Artwork Home From Bristol

Your individual painting can be taken away on the very same day, up to an A3 size. Artwork sizes up to an A2 size may be delivered from the studio or collected later on at your team's discretion.

Often times, teams choose to hang their art up in the office and sometimes even send out pictures of the event after it is over, keeping those memories fresh.

Get your team creative day booked now and see for yourself why a day in Bristol is not to be forgotten!